THE PARTY OF Billy's Christmas Greeting

By EUGENIA RABBAS

"I believe he would have shaken me, if he hadn't rushed out in time to prevent himself from doing it," she continued, the ever ready dimples venturing out of their hiding places, but she banished them "I'll never, never forgive him, even though he asks me to, which of course, he won't! And he calls me

Next morning Marjorie was tremenbusy wrapping up dainty little mas, and her many friends must be remembered, in spite of quarrels and Still, she seemed very much preoc cupied over her work, and quite suddenly she threw aside the piece of holly she had been toying with, and fairly flew to the telephone.

In answer to her impatient summons, she was quickly connected with Brown & Co.'s book store. "Have you sent out those books that were ordered for Mr. William Dunning?" she ask ed anxiously. The answer evidently pleased her for she breathed a sigh of relief. "That's all right; I'm glad you haven't, for I have changed my mind about them. Please cancel the order."

Marjorie hung up the receiver with an air of triumph. "There, I'm glad I thought of that! Billy would have construed a Christmas present into an abject apology," she said, her indignation rising at the very thought of such a thing.

But when she went back to her parcels and picked up the little twig of holly she had intended tucking away into one of them, her face softened. "I know that isn't the right kind of a Christmas spirit to have, but I can't have Billy thinking that I am admitting I was wrong, when I know I wasn't," she argued.with herself.

Meanwhile what would Billy do? Would he, too, lest Marjorie might influenced by the spirit of peace and good will, which was a part of this sea son, would hold forth the olive branch in the form of a Christmas greeting.

The fovous ringing of Christmas bells and merry shouts of her younger sisters and brothers, when they discovered their stockings the next morning, only served to emphasize her depression.

"Billy never loved me; if he really and truly did he never could treat me like this," she told herself as she stood looking with unseeing eyes at the snowy Christmas world.

Just then a young man, fairly tearing around the corner, arrested her attention. It was no less a person than Billy himself who was coming, post haste, to see her.

Marjorie looked at him in won-What had come over Billy? It wasn't a bit like Billy to eat humble pie at any time, and this mexpected turn of affairs completely lisarmed her.

"O, Billy, I am so glad you came." Billy took some little time to emphavize his appreciation of her welcome.

then "Glad I came? Why wouldn't I come, dear?" he asked. "Because you vowed you wouldn't unless I apologized," Marjorie explained mischievously. "You didn't think I'd be so narrow and unforgiving as to ignore your dear little peace offering? . I brought one of the books with me to read something to you," be told her, and diving into his pocket he produced a little copy of "Romeo and Juliet." Marjorie was surprised for a second then it flashed over her what it all meant. Brown & Co. had forgotten to cancel her order and Billy had re ceived the books. Billy had construed her sending them into a humble plea for forgiveness. He most probably wouldn't have come at all if it hadn't been for that. She stiffened visibly and all her love

Ethel—Surprised and encouraged, eh, dear?

A FEDERAL HEALTH BOARD.

It is gratifying to note that the bill for the creation of a federal health board will not be allowed to pass without a protest. Reports of organized risistance come from all parts of the country, and it may be that the opposition will soon be sufficiently solidified to defeat a project that promises infinite mischief for the community, and suffering and injustice for the in-

The proposal is based upon those pecious claims that are potoriously hard to controvert. If a federal health board were to confine its activities to the promulgation of salutary advice upon hygienic matters, to the abatement of quackery, and to the purity of drugs, it might be possible to say much in its favor, although it would still be difficult to say that such an organization is needed. But we know that it will attempt to do far more than this, seeing that its adherents have loudly proclaimed their intentions. Indeed, there is no secrecy about them. It is confidently expected that the board will consist of advocates of one school of medicine only and that the methods of that school will be not only recommended, but enforced upon the nation. Indeed a board that was in any way representative of the medical profession as a whole would be stultified by its own disagreements. Outside the domain of simple hygiene, for which we need no federal board at all, there is no single point of medical practice upon which allopaths, homeopaths, eclectics and osteopaths could be in unison. Any board that could be devised by the wit of man must be composed of representatives of one school only, and this means that all other schools are branded as of an inferior caste, even though nothing worse happened to them. And something worse would happen to them. If we are to establish school of medicine, if we are to assert that the government of the United States favors one variety of practice more than others, why not establish also a sect of religion and bestow special authorities upon Baptists, Methodists and Episcopalians? An established school of religious conjecture seems somewhat less obectionable than an established sect of pseudo-scientific conjecture.

Those who suppose that a federal board of health would have no concern with individual rights are likely to find themselves undeceived. It is for the purpose of interfering with individual rights that the proposal has been made. We need no special knowledge of conditions to be aware that what may be called unorthodox methods of healing have made sad inroads into the orthodox. Homeopathy claims a vast number of adherents who are just as well educated and just as intelligent as those who adhere to the older school. Osteopathy, eclecticism, and half a dozen other methods of practice are certainly not losing ground. Beyond them is the vast and increasing army of those who may be classed under the general and vague name of mental healers. Those who are addicted to any of these forms of Would be, too, less amountains of the federal health think he was admitting something, ighter and children's boots and shoes, shines them rubbing, 25c. > There is no certainty as to the definite time when Malachi uttered his prophecies, because no data is given in the book, and the sins which he sought to reform were present throughout the whole period of Ezra and Nehemiah, from 458 through the rest of the century. Most place him soon after Nehemiah's second coming to Jerusalem, between 433 and 430.

> He is plain spoken, and direct, without high eloquence, or supreme poetic power, but abounding in effective similes, metaphors and imagery which hit the mark, and do the work. What a London paper says of a distinguished man's straightforward speeches applies well to the sermons of Malachi: "A sound and healthy gospel doubly welcome because 'the world is waking to the consciousness of intellectual and moral hunger which only these truths can satisfy.' If we read the later chapters of Nehemiah and compare the sins and evils which Nehemiah labored to reform, with the sins and evils which Malachi denounces, it will be seen that both are laboring for the same ends, and realize the same necessity of reform. God was dishonored, and religion made a mere form and farce, > by offering mean things for sacrifices, as polluted bread, and lame and sick animals, by refusing to do the simplest service in the temple without pay, by refusing to pay tithes for the support of the temple worship, by being weary of serving the Lord, by intermarrying with the heathen.
